Brotherhood

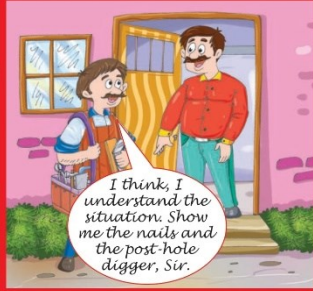

Once upon a time, two brothers who lived on adjoining farms fell into conflict. It was the first serious rift in forty years.

One morning, there was a knock at the elder brother's door. When he opened it, he saw a man with a carpenter's toolbox.

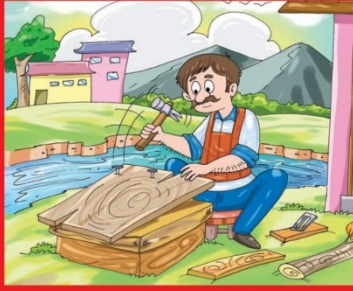

The carpenter understood the work and was happy about it. He asked the elder brother to arrange the material.

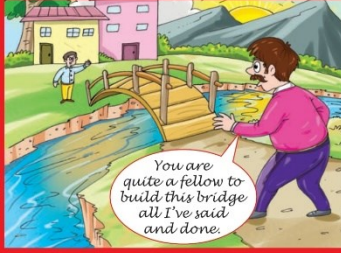

The elder brother had to go somewhere for the day for trade. He helped the carpenter to get the material ready before leaving.

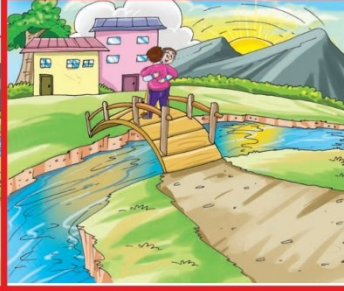

The carpenter worked hard the whole day, after the brother left. He was busy measuring, sawing and nailing.

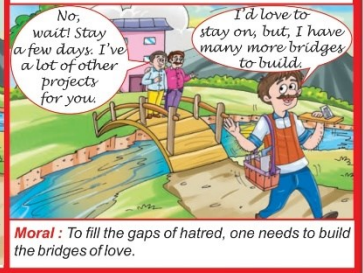

At sunset, the farmer returned and was surprised to see the scenario. There was no fence but a bridge. To the other end, his younger brother was standing with his outstretched arms.

The two brothers stood at each end of the bridge. Then, they met in the middle, taking each other into an embrace.

While they were busy embracing, the carpenter took his tools to make a leave. Both the brothers turned to see the carpenter hoist his toolbox on his shoulder.

Moral : To fill the gaps of hatred, one needs to build the bridges of love.
